Dear Ms. Gentry,

I appreciate your concern over Mr. Bunny's disappearance. I'm afraid I can't be very optimistic about his timely return.

The good news is that apparently, he left on his own to meet up with Scarlett.

The bad news is that we still don't know where they are, and reports are coming in from all over the country. They could be anywhere, and I'm afraid they may both wind up in trouble.

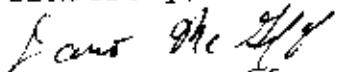

In fact, I've been in touch with law enforcement agencies and I have been able to trace Scarlett's journey from a private clinic in Saratoga, New York to New Orleans, Louisiana. "Peter" is no more. He underwent a transpiciel/transsexual operation in Saratoga. That means he, or she, is now fully female and partly rabbit, at least on the inside. Scarlett is still a dog on the outside. And you better believe the folks back East aren't used to seeing a dog chow down on carrots.

Floppy, as I'm sure you know, is a very discrete traveler. I have no reports on him until they actually met up in New Orleans. Then, of course, a rabbit and a dog can't check into a motel together without attracting a great deal of attention, even during Mardi Gras.

Actually, in spite of the bizareness of the situation, Scarlett's behavior has been exemplary and together, they may good for each other. Scarlett has become more sedate and it sounds like Floppy is letting loose and having fun.

I am sending a photo I found in my files of Peter and his pack caught in the act. I'm sorry I can't give you more information. Since Peter completed his probation and there have been no new charges, all we can do is hope those kids straighten up and fly right.

Sincerely,

Daniel McGruff
